

Question styles

01/31/2024 1:20 pm EST

The CivicScience platform supports several question styles, and one of those styles has subtypes. Some question types can be managed via the InsightStore, but others lack InsightStore support and are controlled through our database.

Radio

Most questions are in the radio style, also called single-select. They have radio buttons, and only one answer may be selected.

How much do you like Lexus cars? ⋮

Never heard of them

I love them

I like them

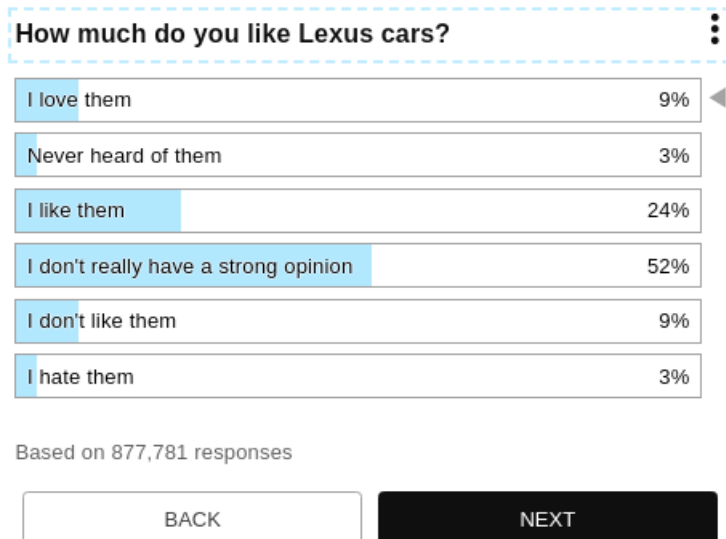

I don't really have a strong opinion

I don't like them

I hate them

Select

Select questions are a subtype of the radio style. They display the question using the browser's built-in dropdown menu. Responses are shown as above.

How much do you like Nike clothing?

Please select your answer

Emoji

This subtype question only supports single-character emojis in its option text field, and those emojis are shown without text in a large size, as shown in the example below. Responses are as shown above.

Do you like emoji?

Good examples of emoji question usage are thumbs up/thumbs down or a combination of emoji faces such as smiley, indifferent, and frown.

Please get in touch with your account manager if you want to create an emoji question.

Autocomplete

This style permits the user to type or filter to get a response.

Checkbox

Checkbox questions are managed as groups of items, each of which is a standard radio question in our database. Respondents may choose as many options as they like.

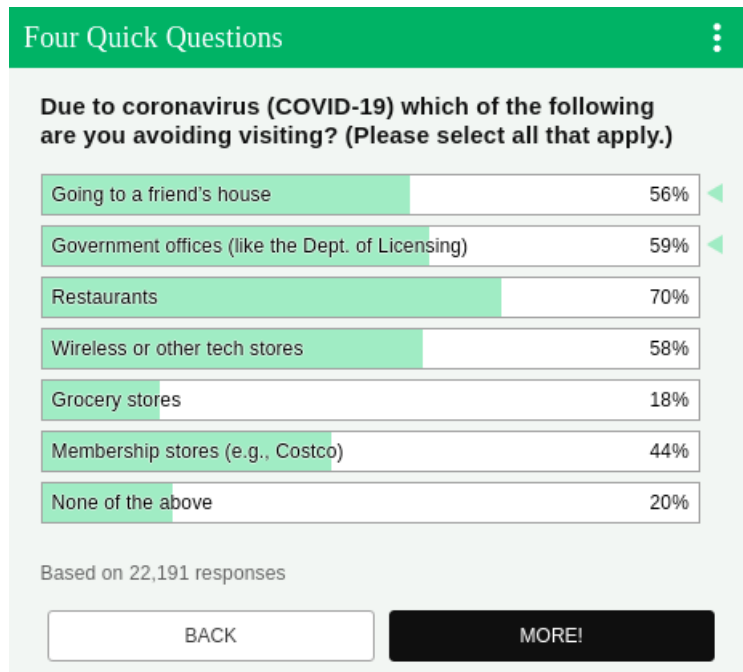

Four Quick Questions

The answer options for matrix questions are also considered radio questions.

Please get in touch with your account manager to have matrix questions created.

Text

This style provides a single text box with a validated entry. We have one text question asking for the respondent's zip code.
