

Backstop questions

You may have seen certain questions more frequently than others and wondered why that happens. They are probably backstop questions.

The poll unit loads news/pop culture questions first, followed by one or two value questions and then a profile question. If a question is pinned to the page, it is loaded first. If no pinned question is present, an engagement question from a feed is served first.

If a respondent answers questions repeatedly on the page, they may reach the end of the available news/pop culture questions. In that case, a backstop question will be asked. (Backstop questions are news/pop culture questions; they're lower priority than others.) If no backstop questions are available, a value question will be served.

Backstop questions can be re-asked at varying intervals from 0 to 30 days.

Examples of backstop questions include:

- How are you feeling today?
 - Do you subscribe to a print newspaper?
 - Would you say you've seen something you deem to be 'fake news' / 'fake media' this week?
